

$100,000 FIRE

One of County's Biggest Industries Destroyed by Flames

COTTAGE PLANING MILL

Plant in Ashes—Bedford and Huntingdon Companies Assist in Long Fight.

Perhaps the most destructive and costly fire in the history of this county broke out at the plant of the Cottage Planing Mill Company of Everett, G. H. Gibboney proprietor, about 11:30 Tuesday night. The buildings, machinery, worked lumber together with a big supply of washing machines and other finished products were all completely destroyed, the loss being estimated at more than $100,000, there being but about $6,000 insurance on the property.

The Cottage Planing Mill was one of Everett's and the county's biggest industries, employing about half a hundred men to operate, while there were more than a hundred others on the pay roll who were engaged in construction of buildings in this and other counties and in getting out and hauling lumber.

The works were completely equipped with modern wood working machinery and the plant was up-to-date in every particular. Whole buildings, worked out and ready for shipment were contained in the plant.

The fire was of incendiary origin as is proved by the fact that flames were discovered at four different places on the property.

The Everett fire fighters were unable to cope with the situation, though they played on the burning mass with hose drawing water from the borough mains.

About 2 o'clock Wednesday morning the Bedford Company received a call for aid. The local firemen under Chief W. R. Piper were gotten together and the steamer and hose carriage were loaded when a hasty run was made to the scene of the conflagration, the train being hauled by Engineman William Heltzel. At 4 o'clock three streams were being thrown by the Bedford boys who kept their apparatus in operation practically without intermission until about 12 o'clock Wednesday night when all hope of conquering the flames, which had gotten possession of a massive pile of offal from the insulator pin department, was abandoned.

The Huntingdon firemen arrived on the scene shortly after 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and assisted in the effort to conquer the stubborn fire, continuing until about noon yesterday, the fire still blazing from the offal pile which contained thousands of loads, and which will probably burn for days.

The buildings in the neighborhood are being protected.

The Bedford boys arrived home about 3 o'clock yesterday morning considerably fatigued from the long fight, for which they deserve much credit.

Prosser, of Bedford, and George W. Derrick, Joseph F. Bidle, Esq., and M. D. Barndollar of Everett. After the convention Messrs. Arnold and Sammel went to Gettysburg, where the former's son, Thomas Arnold, is a student at Pennsylvania College, and Mr. Prosser went to Philadelphia to visit his daughters.

David Putt

David Putt, a lifelong resident of Saxton, died at his home there on Monday, aged 77 years, six months and 16 days. He was a soldier of the Civil War and served his country faithfully. Three sons and two daughters survive: Howard, Chas. and David Putt and Mrs. Jennie Heister, of Saxton, and Mrs. Lizzie Donelson, of Six Mile Run. A number of grandchildren and great grandchildren also survive.

The funeral services were conducted in the Church of God, Saxton, Wednesday afternoon by Rev. F. W. McGuire. Interment was made in Grandview Cemetery.

FLINN IN CHARGE

Mantle of Republican Boss in State Transferred from

PENROSE TO PITTSBURGER

Roosevelt Forces in Complete Control—The Test of Strength—Bedford County Recognized.

"Westward the course of Empire takes its way" now has a political significance in Republican circles in Pennsylvania, for the mantle of power, the insignia of the boss, long worn by Senator Penrose of Philadelphia, has been transferred to William Flinn of Pittsburgh, who more daring than Penrose ever dared to be, even took the gavel from Chairman Porter and personally conducted the business. The Roosevelt forces were in complete control; the platform adopted endorsed all the Roosevelt "policies," and the convention elected 12 delegates-at-large to the Chicago convention with instructions to vote for Roosevelt.

The anti-Penrose State ticket was nominated consisting of Robert K. Young of Wellsboro for State Treasurer; Senator A. W. Powell of Pittsburgh for Auditor General, and the following Congressmen-at-large: A. H. Walters, Johnstown; Fred E. Lewis, Allentown; Arthur R. Rupley, Carlisle, and John M. Morin of Pittsburgh.

The Test of Strength

The steam roller was applied to the remnant of the old Penrose machine whenever an attempt was made to get in the way of the Flinn program. Charles F. Wright, the present State Treasurer, made a fight for nomination for another term with the support of the regulars, but was defeated by Young, the vote being 244 to 108. This was the only test of strength of the opposing factions.

Flinn elected his personal associate, Henry G. Wasson of Pittsburgh, as State Chairman, to take the place of Henry F. Walton of Philadelphia, and the new leaders will now take possession of the party machinery. Flinn also had himself elected chairman of the Executive Committee of nine with full power to act for the state convention in urging the legislature to enact the laws advocated by the platform or to reconvene the convention if the legislature is unresponsive.

Bedford County Recognized

B. F. Madore, Esq., who conducted the Roosevelt campaign in this county and won the spurs from Lieutenant Governor Reynolds, was chosen an alternate delegate-at-large; W. S. Arnold, one of the delegates, was one of the honorary Vice Presidents and was appointed one of the committee of seven to draft new rules. The other delegate, Mr. Sammel, who won his place by the use of stickers was on the committee on organization.

Lieutenant Governor Reynolds is said to have occupied a box in the theatre during the convention which flattened the Penrose machine, the idol of his heart, while his chief is said to have departed on the eve of the catastrophe for his home in Philadelphia. But this bravery cannot be said to be without a parallel in history, for we are told that Nero fiddled during the destruction of Rome.

High School Entertainment

Judging from comments made by persons who attended, the entertainment given by the High School last Tuesday night was a grand success. Every person seemed pleased and gratified with the high class exercises rendered.

Unusual ability was shown by every member who took a part in the exercises. For some, this was their first public performance. Nevertheless, each one was thoroughly prepared to perform his part, and entered into the occasion to make good.

The attendance was very gratifying; every seat of Assembly Hall was occupied. In view of this, the fact is brought out that the people of Bedford are interested in their schools, and also show their appreciation when something is well done.

Averted Wreck on P. R. R.

Tuesday morning John W. Smouse discovered a broken rail while walking along the track of the P. R. R. between Lutzville and Hartley stations. He awaited the approach of the passenger train due here at 9:37 and flagged it with his umbrella, thus averting what might have been a disastrous wreck.

BAY STATE ELECTION

Preferential Primaries in Massachusetts Favor

CLARK AND TAFT

For Presidential Nominations—Ballot Deceived Voters—The Result Significant.

Boston, May 1.—Taft appears to have many thousands more supporters in Massachusetts than Roosevelt.

On the face of the returns, the President's popular majority is 4,000, but reports from all over the state have come in today showing that great numbers of Taft ballots were thrown out because of being invalidated by errors. There is no doubt of the election of the eight alternates-at-large. There were but eight of these named, but in the matter of delegates-at-large in addition to the eight there was a ninth, Frank Sieberlich, of Boston, who ran independent, but like the others, pledged to Taft.

The ill-arranged ballot appears to have deceived the voters by the thousands. Taft headquarters say the number is estimated at 18,000 and reports to the newspapers from all over the state indicate that this estimate is not an exaggerated one.

At Taft headquarters it is declared that the question will be settled by the Chicago convention; furthermore, it is altogether probable that the Taft people will ask the National Convention to seat their delegates-at-large. They do not relish the idea of having the "Roosevelt bunch" represent the state as the Colonel by his release today evidently intends.

The district delegates will be represented at Chicago by 22 Taft men and 14 Roosevelt men.

Chairman Riley of the Democratic State Committee declares his conviction that the preference vote is morally binding on the delegates and that therefore all the Massachusetts men in the Baltimore convention, although elected pledged to Foss, must and will vote for Champ Clark, who defeated Wilson by 19,000 votes in the state.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., May 1.—Colonel Roosevelt renounced his claim today to the eight delegates-at-large to the Republican National Convention elected for him in Massachusetts yesterday. He telegraphed them that he would expect them to vote for President Taft, taking this action, he said, because of the fact that President Taft carried the state on the Presidential preferential vote.

Union Service

Next Sunday evening, May 5, at 7:30, there will be a service in the Methodist Church in which the members of all the churches of Bedford will unite. The Rev. Hugh B. McCauley, D. D., of Trenton, N. J., will be present and will deliver an address in the interest of a closer affiliation of all Christian people. In view of the fact that the church will be crowded it is hoped that all will come early to avoid any confusion after the service has begun.

A Real Good Laugh

A real good laugh at the Lutheran Church, Friday evening at 8 o'clock. There will be given a Poverty Social by the young people for everybody. You are not to come dressed in your best, but just ordinarily. You shall bring a trifle of an object with you wrapped up so no one can see it. There will be an exchanging of gifts. You need no money, but bring your purse at any rate. A fine program of music will be rendered by good talent. Com.

Mrs. Bessie May, wife of William A. Richards, died at Akron, O., on Wednesday, April 17, aged 26 years, six months and ten days. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Clark, of Everett, who, with her husband, two children and one sister, Mrs. Cloyd Fry of Defiance, survive.

The body was brought to Everett, where the funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Hoffman in the Union Memorial Church on Sunday, April 21. Interment was made in the Memorial Cemetery.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope to any man who will write me for it.

HECKERMAN LETTER

"Remain on the Farm and Be Happy."

Spartansburg, S. C., April 29.

The weather is fine and the grass is growing. The rye is in heads and the wheat soon will be. Tobacco plants are about ready to be transplanted and all would be as merry as a marriage bell, if only there were more boys at home to help raise the crops and gather them into the garner. So many have gotten the notion into their heads that it is not the proper caper to live on the farm. It is well known to all men, however, that you can't violate a law of nature without causing trouble. You remove from the farms the men whom nature has especially endowed to occupy that place and huddle them up in the cities and you make trouble and lots of it at both ends of the line. That is what is the matter now and that is practically the reason for the high cost of living. Too many people have quit the country and gone to town. Too few are living in the country on the farms who are making any surplus, or in other words, there are too many food consumers and too few food producers. I know plenty of men who used to live on the farm and have plenty of all the good things needed in the home. In other words, they kicked their feet under their own table.

Some of these same people got it into their heads that farm life was a low calling and that their children would never amount to shucks, if he raised them on the farm, where they always had plenty and were not obliged to divide an egg between two of them (high cost of eggs in city), so he sold the old mules that for years had drawn the plow, the mulley cow that gave such good milk when she did not eat wild garlic, and the domineer chickens that furnished each child a whole egg, and went to the city to live. Here he had to sweat like a "nigger in a soap box" to keep from starving, and starvation from stalking in his back door. Of course, his girls sit in the front door instead of cooking, washing and doing all the chores as they used to do down on the farm. He keeps a cook now and his girls study art and music, read the fashion papers instead of the church papers, and spend much of their time in flirting with the cigarette-sucking dudes about the city. Who do not know what an honest hour's work is and never in all their lives did one. Those fellows who would not know a monkey wrench from a plow point were they to see both by the roadside as they strutted along with a cane under their arm. This same man's boys, who at one time could cut stove wood or in fact did most anything on the farm, now wear yaller shoes, green or red neck-

CATARH GONE

No More Hawking and Snuffing When You Breathe Hyomei.

HYOMEI (pronounce it High-o-me) is guaranteed to end the misery of catarrh.

Breathe it, destroy the catarrh germs, and soon hawking and snuffing will cease.

Breathe it, and crusts will no longer form in the nose; mucus will not lodge in the throat; all inflammation will leave the membrane of the nose and throat and your head will feel clear and fine.

Breathe it for coughs, colds and sore throat; its soothing, healing, antiseptic action is better than all the stomach dosing remedies in creation, and there isn't a particle of opium, cocaine or other habit forming drug in it.

Complete outfit, which includes inhaler, $1.00. Extra bottles of HYOMEI 50 cents at F. W. Jordan's and druggists everywhere.

ties, "biled" shirts and cuss as the cigarette fiend usually does.

These same transplanted youths now look down on the farmer and point their finger at him in his every-day togs as he drives to town with a load of produce. Some of these same boys steal the linchpins from his wagon, just for fun, but when their dad, who on the farm, had full and plenty of everything, attempts to buy some provisions from the seedy looking farmer, he dips deep into the pockets of his jeans and hands over to the farmer his last dollar for beans and tomatoes with which to feed his family, and while the farmer chuckles to himself at the price he gets for the produce he has that day brought to town, and the farmer's children eat the beans and tomatoes, as if they were the richest delicacy, and do that without butter made from the old mulley cow. They eat these things not because they are fond of them, not because of the high cost of living, no, no, but because they have quit their calling, because they have become a band of consumers in lieu of a band of producers.

Go back to the farm is the cure for your high-priced living. The farmer is a whole show in himself now-a-days, and will be for all time to come. He feeds the whole pack of humanity from the millionaire to the miner, who works in the bowels of the earth. The person who will not take off his hat to the farmer should be tried for treason and when dead buried in the poor house lot.

The first and eleventh commandment and all that is between them is or should be, "Thou shalt not leave the farm and the plow in the furrow and run off to be a city chap, for as surely as you do it you shall hunger and your stomachs be empty. Remain on the land where the Lord placed thee and raise corn and cabbage, pork and potatoes and all shall go well with you." Thus sayeth Dad.

Please send me the paper to Altamont Hotel, Bluefield, W. Va.

Yours truly,

M. P. Heckerman.

The Lesson of the "Titanic"

While it may be that the Titanic's equipment of lifeboats, life rafts, and life preservers was technically within the requirements of the law, it is quite evident that it is not a safe thing for any vessel to undertake an ocean voyage with safety appliances that can, under no circumstances, provide for more than one-third of the number of human souls she carries. The survivors are almost exactly one-third of those on board the ill-fated vessel. We must infer that the remainder went to their death because there was no adequate provision for their safety. Late last summer a heated debate took place in the British Parliament over a bill proposing to compel the White Star line to provide enough lifeboats and rafts on each of its ships to carry all its passengers and crew, but, said the dispatches, "pressure was brought to bear so that the bill was pigeon-holed." Experts on shipbuilding are now telling us that an unsinkable ship is an impossibility. There ought to be, it would seem, an investigation by the United States Government, of this terrible calamity, which has brought to a watery grave, two miles below the surface of the Atlantic Ocean, 1,500 human beings and $15,000,000 worth of property. Resolutions have been introduced in both Houses of Congress calling for a rigid investigation. A demand also has been made in the House of Representatives at Washington and in the House of Commons at London for some action by the next Hague conference, which shall result in the agreement upon a lifeboat code and a treaty of uniform observance binding upon every contracting power. ORDER SOY BEANS NOW

Letter From Secretary of Six Counties' Farmers' Exchange.

Today we were notified by the seed house at Richmond, Va., of an advance in price of soy beans from $1.60 per bushel to $1.85, and further advised that the demand is very heavy and the price will be further advanced soon. We have asked the seed house to protect those orders already sent in; and expect them to do so at the $1.60 rate.

We have another offering of a limited quantity at New Bern, N. C., at $1.40 per bushel (bags extra at 10c each). The freight from New Bern is 40c per 100, making the cost here of a single bushel $1.80; but where orders are combined so as to make up more than 100 pounds all told, the cost would be $1.64, as the freight rate would then be figured at 40c a hundred for the 60 pounds. The rate from Richmond is 25c per 100 or 15c per bushel in lots of over 100 pounds. It is advisable to combine orders to save this freight.

The variety is the same from both houses, and the samples of seed submitted of very fine grade. The seed sent was well cured and only a trifling part of it split in threshing.

Do not delay in getting your orders in. Combined orders ought to go out by Saturday night, May 4, from Martinsburg, Curry, Hollidaysburg, Williamsburg, Petersburg, Altoona, Huntingdon, Mapleton and other railroad points.

Whether you combine orders or not we will try to do so. For instance, if several men who want shipment to Martinsburg, deposit money for beans with the bank at Martinsburg, we will have the shipment sent in a single lot, having the bill of lading made out to the bank, and notifying the bank of the quantities shipped. The bank also will have a memorandum with which to check the orders.

The way for those who wish the beans to do is to send or take their money to their local bank (or send to Hartley Banking Company, Bedford, Pa.) to pay for the whole transaction, and have the bank fill out the order form below and send it to the Exchange. If the person ordering is a member of course he need not deposit membership fee, as he is paid up for a year from the time he joined. He should pay however for beans, sacks and secretary's fee for his order. The secretary's fee is 15c on orders of less than $10, 20c on orders over $10 and less than $15, and 25c on orders over $15.

Remember that the seed we are sending for now is not to make grain; it is FOR HAY ONLY; and we are using it because it makes a very large quantity of very fine hay, equal in feeding value to alfalfa; and is out of the way in time for fall grain of any kind.

Mr. A. B. Ross will send to all ordering a letter telling how to seed the beans and how to harvest the crop; and will also send inoculating material with instructions for use of same, without charge. It takes 40 pounds (two-thirds of a bushel) per acre for seeding for hay.

P. A. Bellas, Secretary. Schellsburg April 29, 1912.

To P. A. Bellas, Secretary, Schellsburg, Pa.

Dear Sir:

Mr. _____ has deposited with this Bank the following sums of money to pay for order of soy beans to be shipped to _____ Station _____ R. R., at once, viz: _____ bus. of soy beans at $1.40 per bus. _____ sacks at 10c each _____ Membership fee (if not paid) at 25c. Secretary's fee. _____ Bank.

THE MEANEST SOUND THAT'S HEARD.

How oft within the still night 'That tomcat yells from the back fence! I throw a brickbat at his skull. Consign him quick to hades hence! He quets, then, like Caesar's ghost, He will not down; but, with a yowl, He snorts and hisses, cat-a-wauls And makes of night a hideous howl.

And there's the hound that never sleeps. A cavernous moving mouth is he. "Bow-wow! Ki-yi!" I fire a gun. He bow-wows back; he thinks its fun. I throw the bed slats at his head, I swear till alphas lurid red, I yell till I'm exhausted quite, Yet that hound howls till morning light.

But what are such to human bores, The grouchy glooms that growl around? The pessimist with mournful mouth, The knocker with his rasping sound—Beside such cats are nightingales; Beside such Towlers a sweet bird. Yes, pessimist, knocking cuss, You make the meanest sound that's heard.

THE PERIOD OF INCUBATION.

Broody Biddy is apt to fool us by hatching her eggs before or after the date set. Though a hen generally fulfils her hatch the twenty-first day, the condition of hen or eggs or weather may vary the time. We have known eggs to hatch the eighteenth, nineteenth, twentieth, twenty-first and even on the twenty-fourth day. A hot blooded hen that sits tight on strongly fertilized fresh eggs often finishes on the eighteenth. A hen, of low hatching heat hatches late, and though the eggs are strong her chicks may be weak. A fussy hen that goes off and on and neglects her eggs may retard her chicks to the twenty-fourth. Extremes of temperature often affect the time of hatching, heat hastening, cold retarding the chick. We believe incubation may be suspended without injuring the germ.

English fanciers guarantee all eggs in a setting fertile. They place them under heat just long enough to see the germ, test out infertiles, then ship. We have reset eggs deserted by hens for several days, and they hatched well. Through accident to an incubator 200 eggs were away from hatching heat for thirty hours. They were kept covered, reset and 180 chicks hatched one day behind time.

We mention this so you may not rush to throw out eggs that do not hatch on the minute. Though circumstances may cause occasional variation, each breed of fowls has its period of incubation, the following table being considered standard for the species mentioned:

	Days.		Days.
Chicken	21	Turkey	28
Guinea	25	Peafowl	28
Goose	30	Pheasant	25
Duck	28	Partridge	21

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Duck yards should be scraped often. Wet weather soaks them up and the white ducks puddle, and how filthy they get and, oh, what a smell! "Nutsed."

Aniline dye instead of eggs' is being used in Philadelphia to give cakes that pretty yellow color. Yes; the fool and the deep dyed villains aren't all dead yet.

Butter and eggs naturally go together, and poultry and dairy go so well to gether that many are combining the two. With bees and fruit added there's a bonnie bonanza.

A butcher of San Francisco swallowed fifty-four eggs in 156 seconds and won $100. Then he took two drinks of whisky and resumed his butchering. That sure beats the Old Nick.

Cock fights, dog fights and bull fights are now under the ban in the Panama canal zone. Think of $50 fine or jail for fighting roosters! This new law spoils another good market for game cock breeders.

There are some markets where there are but few calls for ducks. It's no wise to dress a whole stack of ducks and then have to haul them back home. Better take a crate of live ducks—market and test the demand.

Cuba and South America are the market for game cocks. Enthusiasts pay it pays much better to breed and sell these fighting birds than to fight them in this country and get fined and have their names in the newspapers.

In buying that new gadget dog go to a neighbor, but buy far away from home. On many farms there are related unknown to their owners. They travel so far and are often out of sight so long and often there is a general mixup.

The appetite is the signboard to a digestion both in man and hen, and the quantity to feed a flock must be judged by the way the hens go for to feed. Breeds differ in the quantity they eat, and the same flock on different days does not always require the same quantity.

We asked a farmer's wife who was dressing a hen how she could tell a healthy chicken. She replied that she always kills the hen that's laying—that it is always healthy. This is not always true, and if it was, killing layers is bad policy. For the hen that lays is the hen that pays."

When a York (Pa.) belfry was entered it was found almost filled with sparrows' nests, and almost a wagon load was thrown out, and, oh, the feathers! Those men's little sparrows had gathered up pounds and pounds of feathers that wasteful people had thrown out. Go thou and do likewise.

A black and white Homing pigeon band numbered 017,759, was captured in a Bristol (Pa.) yard where it alighted for rest. An old cluck, mistaking the pigeon for a hawk, was fighting the tired bird when it was rescued. Stray fowls should always be advertised. It's brotherly and also the law.

A MADE OVER STATUE.

Designed to Pose as a King, It Now Represents a Saint.

The most made over statue in the world is in a quaint little church at Yarmouth, Isle of Wight. It was originally designed for that of Louis XIV. of France and was the work of a Roman sculptor who started for France with the statue, but was captured on the way by an English warship. France and England were then at war, and the box containing the statue was taken on board the English vessel with other spoils.

When Sir Richard Holmes, the English commander, examined it and found the head was unfinished he ordered the sculptor to complete it in his own likeness, and so the heroic figure that was intended to represent a French monarch was turned into an officer of the English navy.

When Sir Richard was made governor of the Isle of Wight in 1637 he presented the statue of himself to the Yarmouth church. Half a century after his death a statue of St. John was desired for a certain niche in the church, and an English sculptor was called in to chisel out the face and naval hat of Sir Richard and make them over into the benign features and flowing locks of the saint.

The incongruity of court clothes and a jeweled chain on the figure of one of the apostles did not seem to strike the worshippers as anything unusual, and St. John still occupies his place by the altar attired in the finery of a French king.—New York Press.

GIRAFFES IN BATTLE.

The Long Necked Animals Wield Their Heads as Weapons.

The giraffe has an original and curious method of fighting. The long necked beast has neither claws nor beak nor sharp teeth with which to defend or attack, so when it is out of temper with one of its own kind it does not fly in the face of provocation by trying to disembowel its adversary, as a tiger might, or toss it, as a rhinoceros would.

On the contrary, the giraffe, knowing that it has been provided by nature with a long and pliable neck, terminating in a very solid head, uses the upper part of itself like a flail and, swinging its neck round and round in a way that does immense credit to its organization, brings its head down at each swing with a thump on its adversary.

The other combatant adopts precisely the same tactics, and the two animals, planting themselves as firmly as possible by stretching out on all four legs to the utmost, stand opposite each other, hammering with their heads until one or the other has had enough.

The head of the giraffe is furnished with two stumpy, horn-like processes, so that the animals when at this hammer and tongs method of warfare remind the spectator somewhat of two ancient warriors thumping each other with the spiked balls they used to carry for that purpose at the end of chains. Harper's Weekly.

The Triple Plume.

The three feathers of the Prince of Wales, with the German motto, "Ich Dien" ("I serve"), are supposed to be the arms of the blind king of Bohemia, whom Edward III's son, the Black Prince, overcame at Cressy. The captor, it will be remembered, waited in his own tent upon his captive; hence a special significance to the words "I serve." In this, however, we have a story that history refuses to accept. The triple plume, indeed, as well as feathers of various numbers, came into general use about the time of Edward III. But it was not unknown before that time, and even at that time it was not the distinctive emblem of the Prince of Wales. Other members of the royal family bore it as well as he. Not till the reign of Henry VII. was the triple plume within a coronet restricted to the eldest son of the sovereign.—St. Louis Republic.

The preparation mentioned by the Rev. Chas. Mr. C. A. ABBOTT, August 22, 1905.
60 Ann St., New York City.
Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Remedy (Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Biotin) in cases of pulmonary troubles. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of: that 42 years since, while I was a resident of N. Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. Physicians said I was a consumptive and my family physician told me that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since my cure. Yours truly,
C. A. ABBOTT, M. D., CHAS. SAGER, Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.), N. Y.

The above letter shows what a great boon the Wilson Remedy was to Mr. Sager, but it is but one of thousands received testifying to the curative powers of this wonderful remedy. Write at once to Mr. Abbott at the above address and he will furnish you convincing proof of the great worth to humanity of this preparation.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Communication From Correspondent at National Capital

FOUR DOLLARS A VOTE

Was Spent in New York City by the Roosevelt League—Steel Trust Stands by Friends.

Washington, April 27.—That the Steel Trust is willing to spend money to elect men to public office who are willing to serve it after they get into office, is again being demonstrated.

When Theodore Roosevelt was President of the United States he permitted the Steel Trust to absorb its principal rival, the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company. This permission to violate the law was worth millions of dollars to the Steel Trust, because it practically assured the trust a monopoly, leaving it free, by the simple process of tightening the screws on the public, to extort most any price it desires for its wares.

The absorption of the Tennessee company by the Steel Trust was in direct violation of both the spirit and the letter of the law. No one denies this. Not even the attorneys for the Steel Trust contend now, or ever did contend, that the deal was legal.

This is not the only favor Theodore Roosevelt did for the Steel Trust or the Harvester Trust, while he was President, at the request of George W. Perkins, then partner of J. Pierpont Morgan.

Roosevelt's Commissioner of Corporations investigated the Harvester Trust, found it illegal, but at the suggestion of Mr. Perkins, the report was not made public.

The most exhaustive search of the records of Congress during the years that Roosevelt was President fails to show the passage of a single measure that even in the most remote manner affected the monopoly and the huge dividends of the Steel Trust. Hundreds of such measures were introduced in both the House and the Senate while Mr. Roosevelt was President. Each and every one was chloroformed and killed in committee. And Mr. Roosevelt never raised his voice in protest.

Mr. Roosevelt is now a candidate for office. Every politician in the land is aware that he is spending more money to obtain delegates than any candidate for the Presidency has spent in this country in the last quarter of a century. Where is this money coming from? Let us see:

Eton Huntington Hooker, treasurer of the Roosevelt league, has just filed with the Secretary of State of New York a list of the contributors to the Roosevelt fund. This sworn affidavit reveals that in the City of New York alone George W. Perkins, organizer of the Harvester Trust and director of the Steel Trust, spent $15,000. Frank A. Munsey, the largest individual holder of steel stock (common) in the country, contributed $15,000 more. Thirty thousand dollars of Steel Trust money spent in a city of one state alone, and there are 47 states in the union! This sworn statement shows that in New York City $59,126.75 was spent to get about 15,000 Roosevelt votes, or practically $4 a vote.

Senator Stephenson spent only half as much per vote in Wisconsin of his own money, and it was declared that he thus debauched American standards and should not be permitted to occupy a seat in the Senate!

The point to this article, however, is that the steel trust stands by its friends

SOLDIERS' REUNION

Twenty-Second Meeting of Members of Co. F, 8th Reg., Pa. Reserves.

The twenty-second annual reunion of the survivors of Company F, Eighth Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserves, was held at Hopewell on Tuesday, April 23, which was the fifty-first anniversary of the organization of the company, and the offering of its services to Governor Andrew G. Curtin, to aid in the suppression of the rebellion. As Hopewell was the place where the company was organized, it is proper that these reunions be held at that place. The cordial reception and hospitable entertainment always accorded the survivors of this brave company is also an inducement to meet there as it is always made a very enjoyable event.

The survivors met at 10 a. m. in the P. O. S. of A. Hall, and Captain Eli Eichelberger presided. The original roll was called by Comrade W. H.

Whisel, Secretary, and then answered present, as follows: Captain Eli Eichelberger, E. G. White, John B. Tobias, Johnson Evans, Thomas A. Taylor of Loup City, Nebr.; Aaron Foster, Abel Griffith, George W. Amick, David Horton and W. H. Whisel.

Letters were read from two others: Amos Helphenstine of Greenfield Mo., and Frank Holsinger of Rosedale, Kas.

After attending to some preliminary business, a motion was made by one of the comrades that the present officers be re-elected, which was unanimously agreed to. They are Captain Eli Eichelberger, President; E. H. White, Vice President; W. H. Whisel, Secretary and Treasurer.

At 12 o'clock a recess was taken for dinner, when all in attendance proceeded to the Barnett House, where a sumptuous and excellent feast was provided. To this all did full justice, and the savory viands were most heartily enjoyed.

During the afternoon a campfire was held in the hall, when a number of subjects were discussed, several addresses were delivered, many experiences and old army yarns were related, there being a free talk for all comrades present.

In addition to the member of Company F, the following veterans of other organizations were present to enjoy the feast, and participate in the campfire exercises:

John E. Saterfield, Co. K, 208th Pa. Vol. Inf.; H. H. Bowers, Co. M, 22nd Pa. Cav.; Jas. Claybaugh, Co. G, 3rd Cav.; Samuel Livingston, Co. D, 13th Cav.; George F. Bollman, Co. M, 22nd Cav.; J. W. Snyder, Co. C, 22nd Cav.; R. W. Smith, Co. C, 208th Vol. Inf.; Thomas Ferguson, Co. H, 208th Vol. Inf.; A. B. Bowen, Co. C, 91st Vol. Inf.; J. C. Sparks, Co. K, 133rd Vol. Inf.; George W. McDaniel, Co. L, 3rd Artillery; M. D. Barndollar, Co. C, 133rd Vol. Inf.; J. W. Barndollar, Co. C, 133rd Vol. Inf.; Hiram Watkins, Co. K, 26th U. S. Colored Vol.; Jacob Tate, Co. I, 205th Pa. Vol. Inf.; John Adams, Co. C, 29th Vol. Inf., and Valentine Fink, Co. K, 133rd Vol. Inf.

A resolution was offered by a member of Company F, extending heartfelt thanks to the ladies of Hopewell and the members of Hopewell Camp P. O. S. of A. for their kindness, and for the substantial dinner served on this and all previous reunions, which was unanimously adopted.

At 3:30 p. m., the campfire was closed and all departed for their homes greatly delighted with the pleasures of the day.

LOGGED HIS MEMORY.

A Bit of Humor That Brought Phil May to His Senses.

The most refractory among dumb beasts may sometimes be won by persistent kindness. It is also evident that the obstinate of the human species may be influenced by an assault of humor.

Phil May, the English artist "of most dear memory," had promised to do a colored design for the Christmas number of an illustrated weekly publication. The date fixed on for its delivery passed by, and no design had been forthcoming.

Letters and telegrams were unanswered, and when a messenger was sent to May's house it appeared that he had gone to Paris without leaving any address. This, according to London M. A. P., is what happened next:

"The publishers were at their wits' end, but one of them, paying a day's visit to Margate, was overjoyed to see May basking in the sunshine by the water. The publisher did not make himself known, but cannily ascertained where May was staying. Then he hired six sandwich men to parade up and down before the artist's window with boards bearing different legends. This was their tenor:

"What about our Christmas cover?"
"We are waiting for that cover."
It was a delightful reminder, and in a few days the publishers received one of the most brilliant designs May had ever executed.

ENLIVENED THE PLAY.

Juliet Wanted Limelight and Got More Than She Expected.

At a small seaport town in England a lady star actress of the third magnitude appeared as Juliet. "I cannot do justice to myself," she said to the manager, who combined theatrical enterprise with the conduct of a row of bathing machines, "if I do not have a lime (limelight) thrown on me when I appear on the balcony."

"We ain't got no limelight, miss, but I think we could get you a ship's blue light," replied the obliging manager and to this the lady agreed. The lad who went to the shop to buy the blue light brought back a signal-rocket which was given him by mistake. The prompter was her own man, and in his ignorance took the rocket in good faith.

"Romeo—He jests at scars who never felt a wound."
(Juliet appears. Prompter lights the match)

But soft! What light through yonder window breaks?
(This was the match lighting the fuse.)
Arise, fair sun!

The sun, or rather the rocket, did rise with a hiss that sounded far louder in a theater than it does in the open air. Juliet was knocked off the balcony, the fly borders were set on fire and the theater was filled with sulphurous smoke, while the audience, which was fortunately a small one, made a stampede to the doors.—Exchange.

I speak thus knowing the action of Foley Kidney Pills, as I have given them a good test." They cure backache, rheumatism, and all kidney and bladder ailments. Give them a trial. Ed. D. Heckerman.

MASSACHUSETTS PRIMARIES

The eyes of the politicians and of all who take any interest in politics in the Union have been turned toward the Bay State since the primaries in Illinois and Pennsylvania, which states declared for Roosevelt as against the President and for Governor Wilson as against the other candidates for the Democratic nomination.

The principal fight was among our Republican brethren, both the principals having taken the stump in the campaign in that state.

Prior to the primaries in Pennsylvania the President rather rested upon his oars while his antagonist traveled throughout the country denouncing him whom he had made President for not keeping faith with the people. But the primaries in these states caused the Chief Executive to put on his war paint and strike the trail in Massachusetts. Bad faith and trickery were charged on both sides and the result was a Taft victory.

The one thing that stands out prominently is the fact that the breach between the President and the Colonel has been broadened and deepened by the ugly utterances from the stump, and little less than a miracle will be able to bridge the chasm in case of the nomination of either the present Executive or him who would break down the third term tradition.

The contest on the Democratic side was less heated and the Clark victory was complete. The indications now point to more than one ballot at the Baltimore convention and the duty of every Democrat to accept the choice of that convention is plain, for all of those prominently mentioned for the Democratic nomination are worthy the confidence of the party.

PROMISE AND PERFORMANCE

During his seven years in the Presidency—though pledged to carry into effect the McKinley policy of tariff reduction through negotiation or reciprocity agreements—Theodore Roosevelt never lifted his finger to help bring about reciprocity or any reduction of custom house taxation.

During his whole life, since he became of voting age, Bill Flinn of Pittsburgh, has been a snouter for a high protective tariff. Protection to the limit is a part of his political gospel.

And yet these two worthies have the supreme audacity to incorporate a practical promise of tariff reduction in the platform adopted at Harrisburg, in the hope to catch gudgeons by such self-stultification. Their promises are mere breath. Performance is the test of good faith.—Philadelphia Record.

PENNSYLVANIA SCHOOL NOTES

Playgrounds — Open-Air Schools — State Fund—Defectives.

The State Board of Education has decided that hereafter it will approve no plans for school houses unless proper provision is made for playgrounds. This seems to be a move in the right direction. The physical activity of the child must be provided for in order to secure an all round education. If children are given an opportunity to express themselves in play, they will not resort to practices which interfere with the good order of the community in which they live. No educational movement in the last ten years has attracted as much attention as the movement for the welfare of the child as it can be best conserved in giving it opportunities for proper physical expression.

Open Air Schools

The State Board of Education has received a very interesting report from Supt. Charles Lose of Williamsport concerning the establishment of an Open Air School in that city. About 20 children are provided for in this school and the results indicate that the children are gaining in physical strength as well as making rapid strides in their studies. The children greatly enjoy the work and the prejudice on the part of the parents, which was considerable at the outset, has been entirely removed. There is no doubt that schools of this character will be greatly multiplied and that children who have some physical affliction, who are anaemic or tubercular can be well taken care of in this way.

Pennsylvania School Fund

Pennsylvania is the only state in the Union that does not have a permanent state school fund. If the wishes and hopes of the State Board of Education are realized, that deficiency in our educational system will soon be provided for. Under the new Code provision is made for organizing such a fund. The state of Kansas has a fund of $9,000,000, the income of which cannot be used for any other than public school purposes. This amounts to $6,000,000 per year. In the early history of the state, Pennsylvania had a fund of $1,500,000, but that disappeared many years ago.

Care of Defectives

One of the very serious problems confronting the school communities is what to do with the defective children. Pennsylvania has a number of schools taking excellent care of many defectives but the accommodations for the whole number in the state are entirely inadequate. When medical inspection is completely established throughout the state it will no doubt be found that there are between 12,000 and 13,000 pupils who ought to be specially cared for. The State Board of Education has been asked to consider the matter of making adequate preparation for the care of these children.

Poor Districts

Last year there were in Pennsylvania 24 districts, represented by 149 schools, in which the minimum school term of seven months could not be maintained by levying the maximum amount of tax under the old law. Many of these schools are in mountainous regions where there are few people and where the value of property is very low. The State Board of Education will ask the next Legislature to give consideration to the question of providing proper educational facilities for these unfortunately situated districts.

Memory

Learn to forget! The world has many ills
For Memory to brood o'er. Let us leave
The Past, and turn Hope's Vision to the hills,
Where forward looking—we may cease to grieve.
How could the aged bear the pains of years
Gone by forgetting? Dropping
Memory's load?
The last remembered things when Death appears
Are childhood's joys, long since passed on the Road.

EVERETT TO CANADA

Gazette Correspondent Goes Into British Territory.

We had planned our trip for the summer, intending to spend the season in Saskatchewan, and left Everett on April 5 on the morning train for Huntingdon, having as our companions on the train Rev. J. K. Hilty, Russell Whitfield and Grace Ritchey, of Breezewood. We arrived in Huntingdon at 11 o'clock, and left for Tyrone at 11:23 and ran several minutes late; so late that the conductor had to telegraph to Tyrone and hold the train there for us. When we arrived, we had to run across the tracks to the other train, and made the connection just in time.

We took the Bald Eagle Valley train for Lock Haven, and as we went along we saw several streams that were considerably swollen from recent rains and melting snow. There were numerous fishermen along the stream but we saw very few fish. I think most of them got "fisherman's luck."

We noticed that the grain in the valley is not nearly so good as the grain in Bedford County. We ran as far as Milesburg without any striking incident and there they took us a ride up to Bellefonte "free gratis for nothing," then back to Milesburg and then we proceeded to Lock Haven. We took the Buffalo Express out of Lock Haven and as we passed through the Alleghenies we saw much snow lying along the track. After we passed beyond the mountains we came to the New York oil fields and saw many storage tanks along the tracks. We also saw some very fine farms. We arrived in Buffalo at 7:55 p. m. on Monday, April 15.

Then we proceeded to the Y. M. C. A. and from there to the Men's Hotel where we spent the night. I think the Men's Hotel is the best place in Buffalo to stay over night; it is in the center of the city and the rates are very reasonable. It is also conducted on thoroughly Christian principles, making it a very attractive place for the traveler.

We visited many places of interest in Buffalo, among them I will note the following: McKinley monument, Erie canal, Lake Erie, scientific museum, railroad yards, river wharf, business college, Niagara River and an Italian fruit store.

The next morning we left at 10 o'clock for Niagara Falls and we certainly enjoyed our trip to the Falls. We viewed them from the Park, the bridge, Goat Island and the Canadian side, and also the ice mountain at the foot of the cataract, leaving the Falls for the Grand Trunk depot just in time to catch the train for Toronto, Can.

We took the train for Toronto and as we crossed the border line at Niagara Falls, at which place we came in contact with the customs inspector and the emigration agent. After they had ended their questions we proceeded to Toronto, passing by Welland Canal, Lake Ontario and many fruit farms on the way. We arrived in Toronto in the late afternoon on Tuesday. We visited the wharf on Lake Ontario and tramped the streets from that until train time, 11 p. m., noting as we passed the hustling of the people and the cleanliness of the city.

We left Toronto at night for Winnipeg on the C. P. Railroad. There were many emigrants on the train and I think they were the happiest bunch of travelers that I ever saw. We passed through some very wild country and many desolate looking lakes. We saw also Lakes Huron and Superior. We ran 12 hours late and missed our train in Winnipeg by two hours. We arrived in Winnipeg Friday morning at 2 o'clock and had to lay over there until 11:20 p. m. on Friday and we took in most of this city. We left there for Saskatoon, and on our way we passed many small lakes seeing many geese, ducks, and two coyotes, and at last we got to our destination Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock; stayed over Sunday in Saskatoon at the Carleton House. There we found representatives of nearly every civilized nation on the globe.

Saskatoon is a beautiful western city and is growing very fast. It is an ideal place for the investor. It certainly offers rich opportunities to the man with small capital. On Monday we left Saskatoon for Davidson by the C. N. R. R. We arrived at Davidson that afternoon and stayed over night and went to work on Tuesday. Will write a description of the land and products later.

The Mahogany Dresser

The Story of the Other Bidder

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mrs. Ames reread the advertisement with eagerness:

For Sale.—Solid mahogany dresser. French plate mirror, almost new, sacrifice for cash.

Then followed an address in Fourth avenue.

"Tom, dear, that's the very thing we want. Why, I've been looking everywhere for a bargain in dressers for the spare room. Suppose I meet you in town tomorrow and go and see the thing together."

"Couldn't possibly tomorrow, Susan," returned her husband, with decision. "Besides, one can usually buy those things as cheap in the furniture store, and get 'em brand new too."

"But, Tom, one really can get splendid bargains in furniture," persisted Susan tearfully. "Mrs. Smith bought that lovely Sheraton chair for only $3, and when it was all done over it was like new."

"Hum!" observed Mr. Ames absent as he consulted a memorandum book.

"Tom Ames, I don't believe you heard a word I said!" cried Susan.

"M-m-m-h-m!" mumbled Tom, glancing doubtfully at the penciled figures he was creating in the book. "I've got to go and telephone to Jones. There's some mistake about this contract." And he hurried from the room, and a minute later his aggrieved wife heard him talking vigorously to his partner.

"I know what I will do!" she declared suddenly. "There's that $35 that Uncle Bob sent me on my birthday—horrid custom for him to send me a dollar for every year of my life. He ought to forget it—the age, I mean, and not the money. I wish he'd just average it up and call it $50 instead of sending such a gawson reminder that I'm growing older every day."

"I'll take my $35 and hie me to the Fourth avenue shop and buy that dresser for myself, and if there is any money over I'll buy a rocking chair to go with it. Now, Mr. Tom Ames, just watch your clever wife obtain a bargain!"

Much to Mrs. Ames' surprise, when she arrived in town the next day and reached the Fourth avenue address it proved to be a large secondhand store and auction room. There was quite a crowd of people there, and Susan pushed herself with difficulty to the rear of the shop, for she felt a sudden embarrassment at being an active participant in a real auction. She had accompanied her husband several times on such occasions merely for the amusement of watching the crowds and the bargains they obtained, but there was a fascination about it that appealed to her, and she felt rather gleeful as she clutched the bag containing the $35 that marked the years of her last birthday.

The auctioneer was a little dark man with bright dark eyes that darted here and there with the same lightning rapidity that his pointing finger flew and his rattling tongue accompanied. Susan watched with fascinated eyes as one article after another was put up and as promptly, metaphorically "knocked down" again. Lamps and vases, chairs and tables, a davenport and sundry other articles were disposed of when there came a murmured request from the front of the store for the mahogany dresser.

Susan Ames stiffened to attention. Somebody else wanted that dresser as well as herself. She gripped the money tightly and set her teeth. If $35 counted for anything she would own it. She had seen it as she entered the store and admired its fine lines and the richness of its dulled surface. It must be a bargain indeed, even if one had to pay $35 for it.

As the bidding commenced Susan shrank back a little, glad to partly efface herself behind a large teakwood screen. The other bidder was on the outer fringe of the crowd and spoke in little short barks that Susan took a dislike to at once.

"Horrid old thing—I don't believe he wants it at all," she murmured to herself after she had feebly piped "Three dollars!" to be instantly followed by the other bidder yelling "Four!"

"Five!" cried Mrs. Ames.

"Six!" barked the man.

"Seven!"

"Nine!"

"Twelve!" shrieked Mrs. Ames obstinately.

The crowd laughed at the feminine manner of bargaining, but Susan Ames was beyond caring now. Let them laugh if they wanted to. She was bound to have that mahogany dresser and she continued her bidding dollar by dollar now and later by fifty cent raises.

When it reached $20 a man standing next to her ventured a word of advice.

"It isn't worth a cent more, madam," he protested. "It's only veneered—and badly done at that."

Susan only glared indignantly at him and continued her reckless bidding. She was convinced that the other bidder was merely trying to get the dresser away from her, actuated by what strange spirit of malevolence she did not question herself.

This matter of bidding was a highly exciting pastime, but she could not suppress a feeling of regret that it was going—up—up—beyond $25, skimming the edge of thirty—lapping over to thirty-one, two, thirty-three, thirty-four—"Thirty-five!" cried Susan Ames tearfully.

"Thirty-six!" yelled the other bidder.

Susan was crushed completely. She was at the end of her resources. She had the other man, who had the mahogany dresser knocked down to him at the preposterous price of $36. She shrank back behind the screen and affected to look at some dingy oil paintings, while she furtively wiped her eyes. She heard a little bustle of confusion as the successful bidder went up and paid for the dresser, and she heard the auctioneer's merry quips as he pocketed the money.

The crowd shifted and changed every little while, and the people who had witnessed Susan's embarrassment had either disappeared or forgotten her. Probably they were quite accustomed to witnessing disappointed purchasers in the auction rooms.

After awhile Susan lost her interest in the pastime of auctioneering. Nothing else that attracted her was put up, and so she patted her veil into place before a dim old mirror and departed, still clutching her money.

"Hateful old thing!" She still nurtured resentment toward the successful bidder. "I don't suppose he really wants the dresser, and it's the very thing for the spare room. I'm sure he looks just as mean as he acted. He had a mean voice."

Susan Ames had $35 in her pocket. It was all her own money to spend as she pleased. Fate had ordained that she should not spend it on the mahogany dresser, and so, because she felt sorry for herself, Susan proceeded to extract some enjoyment from the gloomy day.

She lunched in an expensive place and ordered all the things she knew would make her fat, although she loved them. She bought herself a dream of a waist that was a positive bargain, and if Susan Ames was not an authority on furniture she understood the value of clothes, and we may assume that she really did secure a bargain.

After the dissipation of purchasing the waist, which she really didn't need, Susan felt the necessity for refreshment of some sort and went to a fashionable confectioner's, where she spent an unmentionable sum of money on a tiny ice in a large glass, but she had the inestimable privilege of gazing upon many people whom she read about in the society columns of the Sunday newspapers, only unfortunately she didn't know one from another, and just when she had concluded that a particularly stunning looking man must be none other than the far famed polo player, Dildine Hankley, somebody addressed the gentleman in question as "Smith," and her structure of identity fell.

After the refreshment Susan went to the matinee and nibbled a box of expensive chocolates and wept over the trials of a charmingly gowned heroine.

Then Susan went home. It was dusk when she reached the suburb where they lived. She felt no uneasiness at the lateness of her return, for Hilda, the maid, was a jewel and dinner would be ready and waiting. Susan had been particular to take the train that her husband usually went home on, but to her surprise he had not appeared.

"Well, Hilda," she said as the smiling maid opened the front door, "I'm afraid Mr. Ames missed the train."

"Oh, no, Missus Ames," smiled Hilda. "Mr. Ames, he ban come home."

"Indeed? Where is he?" Susan glanced into parlor and library and found them dark.

"Hi, Susan, come up here!" called her husband's voice from the second floor. "I've got a surprise for you!"

Susan went, a strange premonition assailing her as she slowly mounted the stairs. Perhaps it was a queer little bark in her husband's voice as he called that reminded her of the man in the auction room. That, coupled with a surprise, was ominous.

Tom Ames stood in the doorway of the spare room, which was brilliantly lighted. The offending oak dresser was pushed into the hall, and there between the windows rested the mahogany and brass glory of the auction room.

It was the mahogany dresser.

"Oh, Tom, where did you get it?" Susan's voice was weak and very near to tears.

"Bought it at auction. Had an hour to spare and ran around to that place you read about. I might have got it for $20, but some fool of a woman bid against me and boosted the price to $30. Thirty-six bones I paid for it, my dear, and I hope you like it!"

"Oh, Tom!" cried Mrs. Ames, and she flew to his arms and cried and wept at the awful queeriness of things in this world that might be so well ordered if men only confided more in their wives. Of course she didn't say anything about this to Tom, who believed she was weeping with joy, and he was congratulating himself on being one of those husbands who don't mind paying $36 for an article that is worth only $20 when the purchase of said article can cause such pure joy in the heart of a little wife.

So the Ameses were very happy over the mahogany dresser even if it wasn't solid mahogany. It was the kind feeling back of it that added to their enjoyment.

Of course Susan never told her husband about her share in the bidding, and that she was the woman who had raised the price on the dresser that her husband was trying to buy for her.

"Yes," Mrs. Ames sighs to her friends, "yes, my dear, I have one secret from my husband that I shall never, never tell!"

And so far she hasn't told.

My Two Love Affairs

By JOHN VERNHAM

That last evening in the library. It was, to say the least, feverish. I was to start for China the next day, to be gone how long no one knew. A man about to go to a foreign country to live permanently would not think of buying a house in the country from which he departs, but I thought nothing of engaging myself to a girl between whom and me would be half the globe—and water at that—neither of us having the wherewithal to reach each other.

It was early spring, and wood blazed on the hearth. We drew a sofa up before the fire and sat locked in a continuous embrace. I told her that the moment my salary reached a sufficient figure I would come home and take her back with me. I thought it might be a year. Even that interval seemed interminable to both of us.

Happy youth—happy in not knowing what lies before it! Had some unkind fairy shown me a picture of the future I would have been miserable. As it was, I lived in a delirium of joy, marred only by those twelve long months that were to intervene before I could return to claim my bride. I was destined to pass from one condition to another so gently that I would not realize the transition.

But for the moment I was happy and miserable—happy that I loved and was beloved; miserable that I must be parted from her to whom I had given my whole being. But there was a kind of delight even in my misery. Young persons sometimes find pleasure in misery; old persons never do, or if they do it is because by exhibiting their misery they may make those about them miserable.

The small hours were growing larger when, after a long kiss, I tore myself away and after two or three hours' sleep was driven to the ship on which I was to sail.

I went on board with a heart like lead. My heart was not only heavy, but there was a smell of bitter water. The weather was bad too. Nevertheless I remained in the clouds, not roseate clouds, but lowering clouds. The face of my fiancée was still floating among them, and I was floating with her. My surroundings had not yet destroyed this mingled happiness and misery. For awhile longer I lived in the clouds.

My first coming down to earth occurred on the third day out. For two days the sea was smooth, and I wrote Rose letters most of the time, to be mailed when we should reach the first port. Then the waves began to dance about us and I fell from loveliness to seasickness. And oh, what a fall was there! My dreams were dissipated. I didn't care to live long enough to return to claim my bride. I wished the ship would sink and swallow me up in oblivion.

When I recovered I didn't resume my love letters. I concluded that I had enough written to make a sizeable packet. I sat on deck in a steamer chair, where I could keep my eyes on the ocean surface, for in this way I avoided seeing things turned topsy-turvy. I could think of the girl I left behind me if I wanted to, but I preferred to concentrate my mind on mathematical problems for the purpose of avoiding that confounded seasickness.

Meanwhile we were sailing on. In the time the voyage was over and I was in Shanghai, a clerk in an American mercantile house. I wasn't worth much to the concern. Indeed, I would require to learn enough of the business to be of any value in it. I kept myself up during this year in an occasional dream of some future happy day when I would return to claim my bride. But she and I had different worlds about us, nothing in short to keep us together, and we fell apart. I have forgotten who wrote the last letter, but I think I did.

A bachelor may keep, or at least appear, quite young at forty. My hair at that age was not at all gray, and I kept it cut short. I was also always well shaved. I returned to America with a competence—not for the girl I had expected to make my wife, for she had been married eighteen years. I reached America in summer time and went to the mountains where I would find a pure, dry air, which I hoped would take some of the Chinese lethargy out of me.

I met a girl about the same age as the one I had left twenty years ago. I was flattered that she set her cap for me. I wasn't very old, and I was well able to support a wife. The love-making between us, at least on my part, had not the freshness, the zest, of my first affair, but it was very pleasant.

My fiancée was chaperoned by a sharp featured woman with a sharp fop, who was having her strength sapped by the care of six children, or rather four, for the two oldest thought they knew how to think for themselves. Soon after we were engaged I was introduced to this lady, who, in offering me congratulations, said:

"I congratulate you, especially on making an engagement that is practically this time."

"This time?"

"Yes. Your first was ridiculous, considering that you were going to live on the other side of the world."

"What do you know about that affair?"

"I should know all about it, since I am the woman you were engaged to when you sailed for China."

that was when the pig fell behind a little. Once Frank turned and yelled "Shoo!" at the pig, just as a woman would have done, but the pig only dropped his snout to the ground and charged at him.

"I wish—I hadn't—made—this—wall—quite—so—high!" panted Frank Bristol as he dodged a sudden feint of the pig and was finally compelled to jump clear over the animal.

"I wish—a—Ann Dangler—would—bring—out that gru-u-el!" he said later, as he stumbled over the trough and arose with one hand dripping with milk. This time the pig really reached him. He managed to jab again at the pig, and the pig stopped in front of the patent gate to take stock of his wounds and grunt defiance at his owner. It was at that moment Frank heard voices outside the high stone wall of the pigpen.

The voice was the shrill utterance of Ann Dangler; the other voice belonged to the girl but for whom he would never have become a farmer. He had once been engaged to Violet Sloan, but Violet's lovely auburn head had been turned by the worship of a dozen other admirers, and they had quarreled, and Frank had closed up his real estate office and taken to scientific farming.

"Getting next to nature," was one way of describing the case.

"He's in the pigpen most likely," Ann Dangler was saying in a hostile voice.

"Pigpen!" shrieked Violet Sloan's accents. "What on earth is he doing in such a filthy place?"

"Filthy?" returned Ann Dangler. "I guess you never see a pigpen that wasn't filthy except this one. 'Tain't natural for a pig to live so clean, I say. Why, Mr. Bristol even turns the hose on him once a week, and that's what's the matter now. The pig has caught cold from being too clean."

"Nonsense," returned Violet. "Who ever heard of any one thriving in dirt? If Frank must raise pigs I'm glad they are nice clean pigs in a cement pigpen."

"Humph!" was Ann's reply as she followed the daintily dressed girl to the cement wall.

"Ah, here is a gate! Shall we go and look inside?" asked Violet, and without waiting for Ann's reply she moved toward the patent gate. Ann trotting close behind. The sight that met their eyes glued them to the patent gate.

Around and around the circular pen paced the weary form of the model farmer. Behind him trotted with dogged persistency the dyspeptic pig. Whenever Bristol showed a tendency to slacken his gait the pig grunted and cantered faster.

Once the pig darted into the covered sleeping pen, and Bristol shot to the door and endeavored to roll the sliding portal to its place, but in vain. It stuck, and ere Bristol could move it the pig dashed out again, shooting the model farmer to an ignominious position on the straw of the pen.

Thoroughly angry, Bristol swung the boat hook at the beast only to have the slippery handle slide through his hands to the far side of the pen.

Now he was without a weapon. Then the pig charged him again, grunting angrily.

He did not dare look at the gate, though he was conscious of feminine forms standing there. He was too excited to wonder what Violet Sloan was doing there. He was mentally composing a letter to be written to the author of the article in the farm manual on "Dyspepsia in Pigs." In this imaginary letter there were many underlined words and countless exclamations and innumerable interrogations.

He was still doing this humiliating marathon around the scientifically built pigpen when he heard an indignant cry from Ann Dangler. From the corner of his eye, as he ran ahead of the pig, he saw Violet Sloan snatch Ann Dangler's pink sunbonnet from her tow colored head, saw Violet's little form slip inside the patent gate, saw her intercept the pig with one flash of the pink bonnet and witnessed an instant later that animal rushing to the left side of the inclosure with frightened squeals, while the pink sunbonnet was tied over his snout and eyes.

"Hurry through—dear!" cried Violet Sloan, holding the gate open for her one time lover to escape.

As the gate slammed behind them Ann Dangler flounced toward the house, her sunbonnetless head held high in the air—a very model of scandalized virtue.

"Dear!" she sniffed contemptuously as she rocked to and fro in the calico covered kitchen rocker. "Call him 'dear'—a man I wouldn't look at twice! I wonder who she is?"

At that instant Mr. Bristol appeared at the door, leading Violet Sloan by the hand. They both looked very happy. "I suppose you wonder who this lady is, Ann Dangler," remarked Bristol pleasantly. "This is now Miss Sloan. Later on she will be Mrs. Bristol and the boss of the model farm!"

"But no more dyspeptic pigs," said Violet decisively. "Poor Frank has run off all the flesh he gained by being in the country here, and the pig is dead—dead as a doornail!"

And the local veterinarian declared that the pig died of acute dyspepsia, induced by too violent exercise after eating.

Ann Dangler insisted that it was because the pig was too scientifically clean.

Ben Daley said it must have been the way the wind was.

Violet Sloan and Frank Bristol—and they were the only two whose opinion on the subject mattered, as the pig was dead—did not say a word. They had not heard anything except their own voices discussing the wedding details.

Stimulate Children?

Ask your doctor how often he prescribes an alcoholic stimulant for children. He will probably say, "Very, very rarely." Ask him how often he prescribes a tonic for them. He will probably answer, "Very, very frequently." Then ask him about Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a strong and safe tonic for the young. Not a drop of alcohol in it.

Always keep a box of Ayer's Pills in the house. Just one pill at bedtime, now and then, will ward off many an attack of biliousness, indigestion, sick-headache. How many years has your doctor known these pills? Ask him all about them.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

ABOLISHES UNSIGHTLY HANDS.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

In all the many and varied rewards of diligence none are better worth while than those that wait upon diligent paper bag cooking. Ease is one of them, deftness another, neatness in the kitchen still a third. It is quite impossible to make mere words convey all that this method of cookery means—still more impossible to set down all that its use will teach you.

For example, its use will teach you how little art can improve on nature in matter of flavors. Paper bag cooking keeps in the flavor, intensifies it, and makes it the sauce of appetite. Good digestion commonly waits on appetite.

But there are other things to take into account. Not the least of them is the saving to one's hands and one's temper in the matter of washing up after a meal.

Whether this falls to the cook, to her mistress, or haply, to the gallant man of the house, who thrusts himself helpfully into the roughest part of the work, the fact remains indisputable that pan scrubbing is hard work, distasteful in the extreme and bound to leave unpleasant reminders. Pots and pans mean the use of strong alkalies. Without them the pots can not be kept sanitary. No sort of glove yet devised will permit the free use possible to the bare hand. The syngism runs about thus wise: To cook in the old way, you must have pots, the pots must be kept clean, or else be a constant menace, and to keep them clean requires detergents so powerful they will destroy human cuticle the same as they "cut grease." Result, rough, reddened, painful hands, in spite of emollients, glove-wearing and so on. The most careful man-curing will not undo the effect of steady pot-washing.

Paper bags, thrown away after one using, minimize pot-washing. Indeed, in many cases they reduce it to the vanishing point.

Baked Blue Fish.—Cut off head and tail, wash clean, wipe with a soft, damp cloth, stuff with "soft bread crumb stuffing," else lay sliced potatoes inside, with a seasoning of butter, pepper, salt and onion, and tie up securely. Rub all over outside with soft butter or dripping, sprinkle with salt, put in a greased bag, with a small lump of fat and a very little cold water. Seal bag and cook in a hot oven twenty to forty minutes, according to weight. Serve with sliced lemon and garnish with parsley. A squeeze of lemon juice in the bag is to many tastes an improvement.

Cat Fish, Baked or Broiled.—Cat fish are good to eat, notwithstanding their looks. Anything under four-pound weight is fine for stuffing and baking. Use a bread crumb stuffing or one made of cornmeal beaten up in egg and lightly fried, seasoning it with pepper, salt and a suspicion of onion. Put plenty of butter in with the stuffing, wiping the fish as dry as possible before stuffing it and salting and peppering the inside. Season the outside likewise, grease well with soft butter, put an extra lump of butter in the bag, add a little milk and water, half and half, and put in a hot oven. Bake in full heat ten minutes, then turn down the flame one-half and cook according to size—it will take about ten minutes extra to the pound. But make a peep-hole and look in before taking out of the bag—eye and nose will help to decide when the fish is well done. A very big cat fish is better cut in steaks or fillets. Wipe dry, dip in melted butter, sprinkle with lemon juice, then with pepper, salt and a little fine bread crumb or corn meal. Lay in a well-greased bag on thin-sliced bacon, put more bacon over it, seal and cook thirty minutes to an hour, according to weight.

THREE DELECTABLES.

By Nicolas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Savory Fish.—Put a little flaked cold fish, with a sprinkle of Parmesan, mixed with a little cream, on a slice of well-buttered toast. Place in bag and cook six minutes in a very hot oven.

Sweetbreads, au Naturel.—Take four sweetbreads, parboil them, take off the skins, dust each sweetbread with salt and pepper very lightly and pour over each a tablespoonful of cream. Slip the sweetbreads into a thickly-greased bag and cook in only moderately hot oven slowly for forty minutes. Open bag, slip out contents on hot dish.

Fowl (Savory Crumbs).—Wash the fowl well inside with plenty of cold water. Dry well and put the liver and a small shallot inside the bird. Have ready a large tablespoonful of white bread crumbs and add to them a lump of butter the size of a big walnut, pepper and salt to taste, a teaspoonful of finely minced chives, and a teaspoonful of well washed and minced tarragon. Mix all together and put into the bag with the bird. Cook gently for sixty-five minutes. Open bag gently onto a hot dish. Send to table with new potatoes and

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson V.—Second Quarter, For May 5, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke vi, 20-26; xvi, 19-31—Memory Verses, Luke vi, 20, 21—Golden Text, Luke xii, 15—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

These few verses in Luke vi are a part of His discourse in the presence of His disciples and a great multitude of people who came to hear Him and to be healed of their diseases as He came down from the mountain and stood in the plain. The teaching is somewhat similar to that in last week's lesson, but the poverty and hunger and weeping seem to be more literal physical conditions than in the Sermon on the Mount; also by contrast the riches and fulness and laughter of verses 24, 25. The contrast between the "now" and a future time is more fully set forth in the Luke xvi lesson, and the bright side of it is concisely stated in I Cor. xiii, 12, "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known." As to literal poverty, we know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ—that though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor, that we through His poverty might be rich (II Cor. viii, 9), and as we think of the Bethlehem manger, the Nazareth home and the hunger and thirst and homelessness of His life oftentimes in His public ministry we may perhaps imagine something of ordinary poverty, but who can tell the full meaning of the emptying, the service, the humility and obedience of Phil. ii, 7, 8, R. V.? The literally rich are often poor in spirit, meek and lowly at heart, while the literal poor are often proud and self centered. We must always remember that the Lord looketh on the heart and trieth the heart (I Sam. xvi, 7; Jer. xvii, 10). The "woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you" of verse 25 seems not to be a very popular verse in some quarters, for even preachers and evangelists have been known to hold back the truth on certain great topics so as to have the approval of men, a very prominent worker having recently said publicly that he aimed never to hurt the feelings of his fellow ministers. How very different from Him who said, "I do always those things that please the Father," and also from the apostle whose principle was "not as pleasing men, but God, who trieth our hearts" (John viii, 29; Thess. ii, 4). Concerning the topic of our lesson "Poverty and Riches," Luke abounds in records of rich men, as in xii, 16 xvi, 1; xviii, 23; xix, 2; xxi, 1, besides the rich man and Lazarus of the last part of our lesson. From these passages we note that a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth, and some would do well to ask themselves, "Then whose shall those things be?" Riches sometimes make it difficult for the owners to enter the kingdom, and yet Zaccheus, who was rich, did enter. Sometimes the gifts of the rich did not count as much in His sight as the gifts of the poor. We are simply stewards, whether intrusted with mysteries or money or other things, and we must give an account of our stewardship. We may so use that which is intrusted to us as to become rich toward God (Luke ii, 21), and those who have been helped by us to know the Lord will make greater to us the glory in His kingdom, while the Lord Himself will reward all His faithful ones at the resurrection of the just (Luke xiv, 14; Rev. xxii, 12). Our Luke xvi lesson study reads like a statement of facts, and there is no reason why it should be called a parable. It is the one occasion on which our Lord drew aside the veil and gave us to see the unseen realities after we leave these bodies, plainly teaching that for each one it will be happiness or torment, not the highest degree of bliss which will be the believer's portion only after the resurrection of the righteous nor the deepest woe which will be the unbeliever's portion after the judgment of the great white throne, but a conscious existence in bliss or woe, with no possibility of passing from one to the other. The reason of the rich man's condition after death was not because he had been rich, but from the last verse of the chapter it is evident that when on earth he had no use for Moses or the prophets. He was not a believer in the Scriptures, but evidently proud and self satisfied. After death he proved the reality of a place of torment and became anxious that his brethren should not reach the same destination. He pleaded that if one went from the dead they would believe, but was told that the writings of Moses and the prophets were all sufficient. We know from John xi and xii that another man named Lazarus did rise from the dead, but while some believed others sought to kill him again (John xii, 10, 11). Our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, by whom and for whom all things were created, knew the unseen realities as no one else did, and we may count on every word He said as being literally so. It is His death for our sins and resurrection from the dead He has provided for forgiveness of sins, eternal life, eternal redemption, a joint heirship with Himself for "whosoever will," and only those who receive Him are the truly rich for time and eternity (Prov. xiii, 18; I Pet. iii, 18). All others are poor indeed! Oh, the multitudes of rich poor people!

Boots and Spurs.

A contemporary manuscript account of the diet of Ratisbon, held in 1630 by the Emperor Ferdinand II. on the occasion of the landing of Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden in Germany, mentions as a remarkable fact that the Hungarian cavalry who rode through the streets to the ceremonial wore their spurs on their boot soles. It is difficult to credit that these spurs were fixed on the flat of the boot, for thus shod the horsemen could neither walk nor stand, especially when the large size of the spurs worn at the period is considered. Probably the writer intended to indicate that instead of being fastened to the heel in the usual fashion they were made to project from the fore part of the military boot, which is a portion of the sole. The same manuscript adds that the Hungarian horses had their manes, tails and feet painted red.

Michael Powers, a member of the Major Dandy Post, No. 843, Perth Amboy, N. J., would like old comrades to know of the help Foley Kidney Pills were to him. He had terrible pains in his back and other painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble and says: "Foley Kidney Pills have cured me in a remarkably short time." Write for particulars. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Child's Timidity Averted Tragedy.

A Tallangatta (Victoria) woman, after undressing her child in the kitchen one evening recently, told the little girl to run upstairs to bed, relates an Australian exchange. The child whimpered and asked not to be sent upstairs without a light. The mother after scolding the child for her foolish timidity, got a light and accompanied her upstairs, when she was horrified to find a large black snake curled up on the pillow.

Charles Wright, 1512 French St., Wilmington, Del., recovered from a severe attack of rheumatism caused by kidney trouble and says: "The rheumatic pains kept me awake at night but after taking Foley Kidney Pills the pain lessened and soon I was able to sleep all night, and I am cured of all kidney trouble." Ed. D. Heckerman.

French Family of Five Generations.

At Granville, in France, is a family now represented by five generations. On January 21 last George Blin was born. Her mother is 18 years of age. Mme. Blin's mother, the child's grandmother, is 37, while the grandmother's mother is 58, and the mother of this lady is now in her 79th year.

KIDNEY REMEDY THAT ACTS LIKE MAGIC.

I have been a terrible sufferer for a number of years with kidney and liver trouble, also nervous prostration and health generally poor, constitution entirely run down until life became a burden. I tried physicians and every available remedy but found no relief. Was induced to give Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root a trial, which acted like magic, and am happy to say that I believe I am entirely cured and now as good as a man as ever.

I believe it my duty to make this public statement that I may help others who may be suffering from the same trouble. Swamp-Root is without question the greatest remedy in the world. Anyone in doubt of this statement or the authenticity can address me as below.

Yours very truly,
M. H. McCOY,
Van Wert, Ohio.

State of Ohio,

The foregoing statement sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence this 18th day of July, 1909, by the said M. H. McCoy.

CHANGED HIS MIND.

He Was Awful Strong, but He Took a Dislike to Boxing.

Talking of the padded mitt and its practitioners, some one remembered a story of Tom O'Rourke when he was managing that black warrior, Joe Wolcott. Every now and then some green horn would happen along and beg to be tried out. It afforded Mr. O'Rourke and Mr. Wolcott a great deal of innocent pleasure to try them out—plenty. On one occasion a large walnut colored man came, hat in hand, to O'Rourke. "Ah'm most powerful desperit, Mr. O'Rourke," said he, "an' strong! My my, Ah'm that strong Ah'm jes' natchally afraid to leave mahself go. Ah want you to match me to fight wiv somebody."

O'Rourke said that would be easily done if the caller was as good a fighter as he believed himself to be. But he'd have to be tried out first. The stranger said he was willing, and O'Rourke called Wolcott. "Take this man out in the gym," said he, "and try him out."

The pair fiddled and fenced about for awhile. Then Wolcott got his chance, whanged that right hand over, and the stranger banded three times before he came to rest. By and by he waked up to find O'Rourke bending over him. "Mebbe Ah'd make a pretty good wrestler, Mr. O'Rourke," said he hopefully.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

WALL STREET TIPSTERS.

They Are a Numerous Tribe and Are Always Ready to Advise.

Wall street is the home of the tipster. You can always find him. You do not need to ask for him. He seeks you out in seductive advertisements, in circulars, letters and all the ways of the shrewd trader. And there are none shrewder than those who nest in Wall street.

You will find the tipsters in every broker's office. Stand at the ticker for a few minutes and hear them as they come up one after another. "This is the time to sell," says one. Directly another appears, takes up the tape, scrutinizes it for a moment, lays it down and exclaims, "A good time to buy!" But go to the head of a house, especially if it be an old, conservative and well established institution, and ask him what he thinks about the market. See how many tips you will get from him. Not many, as a rule.

He will discourse upon the situation tell you the favorable and unfavorable factors, call attention to certain stocks that may be influenced by current rumors, to others that have new possibilities, to others that may suffer from various reasons, and then he will conclude with a general observation that one man's opinion is as good as another's.—Leslie's.

Telling the Banana.

A banana is a hard thing for the greenhorn to buy right. One way to tell is by the tip end. If it is sweet the tip is small and comes to a sharp point. If there is an abundance of thick, tough skin, full of leathery fiber, something is wrong with the banana; maybe it has too much plantain in it. Avoid the banana with the tip all spread out with too much knoty skin at the end.—New York Press.

C. H. Wildman, 143 1/2 Bedford St., Cumberland, Md., writes: "I have used Foley Kidney Pills and find them O. K. I have tried other remedies but Foley Kidney Pills are the best medicine I ever used." They are tonic in action and give quick and permanent benefit. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Strong Tastes and Palates.

Fifteenth century Englishmen did dom used either milk or butter. They used great quantities of spices, however, in their food, and, apparently, did not care for the more delicate flavors that suit modern palates. It is pointed out by a writer that storage eggs and "renovated" butter would have had a ready market with them.

These few verses in Luke vi are a part of His discourse in the presence of His disciples and a great multitude of people who came to hear Him and to be healed of their diseases as He came down from the mountain and stood in the plain. The teaching is somewhat similar to that in last week's lesson, but the poverty and hunger and weeping seem to be more literal physical conditions than in the Sermon on the Mount; also by contrast the riches and fulness and laughter of verses 24, 25. The contrast between the "now" and a future time is more fully set forth in the Luke xvi lesson, and the bright side of it is concisely stated in I Cor. xiii, 12, "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known." As to literal poverty, we know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ—that though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor, that we through His poverty might be rich (II Cor. viii, 9), and as we think of the Bethlehem manger, the Nazareth home and the hunger and thirst and homelessness of His life oftentimes in His public ministry we may perhaps imagine something of ordinary poverty, but who can tell the full meaning of the emptying, the service, the humility and obedience of Phil. ii, 7, 8, R. V.? The literally rich are often poor in spirit, meek and lowly at heart, while the literal poor are often proud and self centered. We must always remember that the Lord looketh on the heart and trieth the heart (I Sam. xvi, 7; Jer. xvii, 10). The "woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you" of verse 25 seems not to be a very popular verse in some quarters, for even preachers and evangelists have been known to hold back the truth on certain great topics so as to have the approval of men, a very prominent worker having recently said publicly that he aimed never to hurt the feelings of his fellow ministers. How very different from Him who said, "I do always those things that please the Father," and also from the apostle whose principle was "not as pleasing men, but God, who trieth our hearts" (John viii, 29; Thess. ii, 4). Concerning the topic of our lesson "Poverty and Riches," Luke abounds in records of rich men, as in xii, 16 xvi, 1; xviii, 23; xix, 2; xxi, 1, besides the rich man and Lazarus of the last part of our lesson. From these passages we note that a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth, and some would do well to ask themselves, "Then whose shall those things be?" Riches sometimes make it difficult for the owners to enter the kingdom, and yet Zaccheus, who was rich, did enter. Sometimes the gifts of the rich did not count as much in His sight as the gifts of the poor. We are simply stewards, whether intrusted with mysteries or money or other things, and we must give an account of our stewardship. We may so use that which is intrusted to us as to become rich toward God (Luke ii, 21), and those who have been helped by us to know the Lord will make greater to us the glory in His kingdom, while the Lord Himself will reward all His faithful ones at the resurrection of the just (Luke xiv, 14; Rev. xxii, 12). Our Luke xvi lesson study reads like a statement of facts, and there is no reason why it should be called a parable. It is the one occasion on which our Lord drew aside the veil and gave us to see the unseen realities after we leave these bodies, plainly teaching that for each one it will be happiness or torment, not the highest degree of bliss which will be the believer's portion only after the resurrection of the righteous nor the deepest woe which will be the unbeliever's portion after the judgment of the great white throne, but a conscious existence in bliss or woe, with no possibility of passing from one to the other. The reason of the rich man's condition after death was not because he had been rich, but from the last verse of the chapter it is evident that when on earth he had no use for Moses or the prophets. He was not a believer in the Scriptures, but evidently proud and self satisfied. After death he proved the reality of a place of torment and became anxious that his brethren should not reach the same destination. He pleaded that if one went from the dead they would believe, but was told that the writings of Moses and the prophets were all sufficient. We know from John xi and xii that another man named Lazarus did rise from the dead, but while some believed others sought to kill him again (John xii, 10, 11). Our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, by whom and for whom all things were created, knew the unseen realities as no one else did, and we may count on every word He said as being literally so. It is His death for our sins and resurrection from the dead He has provided for forgiveness of sins, eternal life, eternal redemption, a joint heirship with Himself for "whosoever will," and only those who receive Him are the truly rich for time and eternity (Prov. xiii, 18; I Pet. iii, 18). All others are poor indeed! Oh, the multitudes of rich poor people!

DESTROY HOUSEHOLD PESTS

Two Methods Suggested by State Zoologist Surface.

At this time of year many persons who are moving into buildings find them already tenanted by small but quite objectionable inhabitants. As a consequence the appeals to Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, at Harrisburg, for information, during this particular season on the subject of destroying household pests, and especially bed bugs, are quite numerous. As a general reply for such information he has prepared the following letter:

"There are two methods of destroying bed bugs; one is to apply thoroughly corrosive sublimate. This is not only extremely poisonous, but fatal to pests. It kills them whenever it touches them. It can be put into an oil can and injected into the cracks and crevices, if immediately after using it the can is emptied and washed well, rinsed with water, and then oiled or filled with oil to prevent further action of the corrosive material. It cannot be kept in a metal oil can for a long time, because it will readily corrode the metal and eat its way through. It can be kept in a bottle, and when you wish to use it transfer it to a spring bottom oil can, and inject it where you wish. You need not be afraid to use this material freely, even though it is rank poison when taken internally.

"The other means, which is certain to get rid of bed bugs, is to fumigate thoroughly with hydrocyanic acid gas. This deadly gas is made by dropping potassium cyanide into sulfuric acid and water, in a tightly closed room, and going out instantly, so that the operator will not breathe it in the least. It does not injure any fabric, metal, food or other material, although it will kill living plants, animals and insects of all kinds when used at the proper strength.

"While it is safe to use, it must be used with considerable care, and for this reason an article was prepared entitled 'Household Fumigation,' which was published in one of the Monthly Bulletins of the Division of Zoology, and is sent free to persons desiring it. Minute directions are therein given. This is the most absolutely certain method of getting rid of bed bugs and other household pests. It is rather expensive, but it cleans the house completely and is satisfactory. I have fumigated several houses, mills, warehouses, etc., in our experimental work, and know whereof I speak in saying it is effective."
